Printable Letter Formation Chart What is The Zaner-Bloser Method? The Zaner-Bloser method is a method used to help student master manuscript and cursive handwriting skills. Zaner-Bloser method supports teachers with a convenient three-step lesson model that can be incorporated into any classroom. Zaner-Bloser letters have two completely different styles between printing and cursive. It is written straight up and down in manuscript printing and slanted in cursive. Zaner-Bloser was the dominant handwriting style in the US until Modern Manuscript (D'Nealian) gained popularity and the 'simplified' Zaner-Bloser was introduced. What is D'Nealian Style Handwriting? D'Nealian is a style of manuscript and cursive handwriting style. It derived from the Palmer Method and was designed to ease the learning of manuscript and cursive handwriting. Different from the Zaner-Bloser style, the D'Nealian manuscript form has many similarities to the cursive version. It is written at a slight slant in both manuscript and cursive. The letters are learned with tails in manuscript printing so the transition to cursive is simpler. In theory, it is easier for children to learn and acquire basic handwriting skills using this method. What is Pre-cursive Handwriting? Pre-cursive handwriting is the transition between printing (unjoined) letters and cursive (joining all letters) handwriting. In pre-cursive handwriting, children practice adding lead-ins and lead-outs to letters and practice to start and finish in the right place for the letters to be joined. Pre-cursive handwriting appears in the National Curriculum at the LKS2 stage. In years 3 and 4, children are expected to add small tails or flicks to mark where the letters will connect when they finally transition into cursive writing. The pre-cursive handwriting stage is important for children to recognize the style and hand movement they will use when they learn to write cursive handwriting. It will be easier for both children and parents to use a gradual approach when learning to handwrite. You can start with a simple fine motor approach, forming letters without a pencil and paper. For example, you can try to do this on the sand when going to the beach. After the children are familiar with forming letters, you can move on to handwriting pages. It will be easier for the children to learn uppercase letters first, and then move on to the lowercase. You don't have to make your children learn to write letters in alphabetical order. Instead, you can teach them to write letters in order of easiest to hardest. English is one of the oldest languages in the history of mankind. However, there are secrets behind the language which we overlook almost on a daily basis. One of those prospects is the history of upper and lowercase letters. Both these terms come from the way in which print shops were organized a hundred years back. Each of those metal types were kept in boxes known as cases. The smaller letters were kept in lower case, while the capital letters were kept in the upper case. This is how both of these terms came into existence. Why Are Handwritten Letters More Sincere? Even though today is the era of emails and texts, some things stay the same. For instance, handwritten letters still hold significance for the readers. Moreover, not only does a handwritten letter take longer to write, but it shows that the writer cares. Keep in mind that we receive emails on a daily basis, and we neglect them the same way. But a thoughtful letter can be treasured for a long time. Think of this way, when you visit a historical museum, you see countless letters from famous personnel which are preserved for generations. How to Teach Number Writing Writing can be a boring process, especially for children who are just starting to learn new habits, skills, and techniques. Parents and teachers can, therefore, try different engaging and interesting techniques to help children learn to write. Numbers writing is a bit tricky skill to learn, and that is why there are many techniques for kids to help them learn number writing. There is this very interesting activity parent and teachers can do to help their children learn number writing fast. Pouring a lot of sand, salt, or glitter on a plate and then asking the children to write numbers on it with their fingers can help them learn writing numbers with fun. Asking your kids to paint numbers on paper is also an engaging way of teaching number writing to them. One technique to help your children improve their number handwriting is drawing a grid and asking them to write on that grid.
