Apply matching felt to a gray sweatshirt ($7, Hanes) and sweatpants to make this adorable costume; The sweats are perfect for a cold night of candy or shenanigans, and make the costume super economical! Advertising According to legend, a ladybug in the house brings good luck — so this sparkling version will surely be special. This DIY kids ladybug costume uses just the right amount of glitter (lots) to make the antennae and stained cardboard wings shine. Elastic shoulder straps make slipping this costume over a dark shirt and black leggings ($6, Target), allowing your candy or shenanigans to be comfortable, warm and cute as a bug with minimal effort. Made of materials you probably have at home, this adorable little robot is so easy to assemble. Three cardboard boxes stacked and spray-painted form the robot's body, and recycled plastic make arms, ears and antennae. Adapt this gender-neutral Halloween costume with an Ivory Tulle Skirt ($18, Gap), khaki or white pants to finish the set. Advertising The sky is the limit when it comes to this creative fantasy of children's airplane. This cardboard plane is ready to take off! Skip the seam in this Halloween costume, and instead use our patterns to embellish a cardboard box with wings, a tail, and even a working propeller. Shiny feathered wings perfectly match a simple cotton sweatshirt to create this super easy (and super cheap) bird costume!). And since it's all made of paper, this lovely bird costume won't leave you with a mess of feathers to clean up when the candy or mischief is over. Turn cardboard into a DIY children's cake costume and use paint and Wool Felt Balls ($4, Michaels) for icing to make this costume ready for the party. Top with a cake hat — which serves smartly as the top tier. Propaganda DIY Halloween costumes should not need a rescue attempt. This may be the easiest armor suit of all time! With a lovely sword, shield and helmet all made of cardboard, your trick or treat will be ready to defend the kingdom. Most traditional Boys Halloween costumes are also Halloween costumes for girls, and vice versa. This costume allows your trick or treat to add your own talent by projecting your shield and choosing your outfit underneath. Add Easy fabric cover and a coordinating outfit and your knight will be out for the rescue of his friends — or some candy! Cardboard horns and ears make the cutest deer costume of all time. Pair with a brown top and a fake infant fur vest ($25, Etsy) dab in white ink twill sardas to complete the look. So cute! Get diy instructions. This forest beaver costume is so adorable—and it's so easy! cardboard axe make a super easy costume this Halloween. Add a child-sized flannel ($16, Old Navy) and some eyeliner and your little guy will be ready to start cutting down trees! Stitch felt leaves for a simple green sweatshirt and pair with brown sweatshirt for this cute DIY tree costume as it can be. So easy, it'll be ready in minutes — and since all you have to buy is sweats and a few pieces of felt, it's super economical! Add some DIY embellishments and pom-poms to a set of long underwear for the fluffy clown costume of all time. This fantasy is so easy —and so cheap! In addition, for the safety of pom-poms and accessories, your child can reuse the pajama set later. Advertising This homemade witch costume is so easy, it can be magical! With a few pieces of fabric and some simple seams, you'll have this easy combination of hat and robe finished in no time. Add a lovely broom to the set and your little one will be ready to fly around the neighborhood collecting candy. Add a rope belt around the waist to tie into bags of magical items such as colored glass stones. All you need for this DIY star costume is a piece of cardboard, glue, and a large tub of Golden Glitter ($3, Michaels). It's too easy! Cut a hole for your child's face and cover with glitter; Pair the star with a coordinating color outfit and your costume is ready! A classic Halloween costume for girls, this princess shows off her DIY talent with crumpled handmade paper. Create a matching skirt and floral brooch, wrapping and wrinkling plain brown paper. Add a papier-mâché crown to complete this fit-for-a-princess look. Or, add a checkered pattern to the paper with colored markers to make your little one a Scottish lair. Advertising A black hoodie the size of a child ($10, Target) and wire hangers form this fire-breathing dragon. Change the set by creating the look with a colorful hood and multicolored felt spikes of hot glue on the back. Turn your little candy or trick into a mischievous mouse, ready to run in search of goodies. For your smaller pip-squeak, simply paste a set of cardboard ears into a headband and fix a long tail stitched into a pair of leggings for this homemade mouse costume that comes along in no time. Trick or shenanigans Little Red Riding Hoods beware! This wolf costume comes to life with the help of a painted cardboard head, a fake fur tail attached to a gray sweat suit, and hairy gloves embellished with cardstock claws. This is a great Halloween costume for DIY kids with few sewing skills required. Necessary. Add an intricate felt tail to a simple blue and yellow combo for the easiest costume of all time! And, as most felt and foam is attached to the tail instead of clothing, you can stick with the shirt and pants for your little one to wear again. This paper doll costume is too cute for words! Dress your child in black and add flat cardboard cutouts, decouped with fabric to create the clothes. Add cardstock or cardboard stickers to finish this fun costume. Give your child his shiny armor with a shop sweatshirt and some pieces of felt! Cut a hoodie to make the helmet, and add a felt badge on the front of a simple shirt. Beautiful, easy and very economical. Also, since it's made of sweat, your little one will get hot on Halloween night! Advertising Whatever your child's temperament, this Halloween, he or she is guaranteed to be a snow-white angel, full of wings and whatever your child's temperament, this Halloween, he or she is guaranteed to be a snow-white angel, full of wings and a halo! You will need a sheet of white marabou feather foam of 1.80 m (12 x 18 inches)Rope or white shoelaces What to do 1. Draw a pattern for an angel's wing, based on the shape below, about 10 inches tall and 8 inches wide. Cut your pattern and use to cut two wings of the foam sheet.2. Along the straight edge of the wings, cut two holes at the top and bottom. These will be used to attach the wings to the sleeper.3. Then decorate the wings. Use a hot glue gun to attach the feather ed boa to the edge of the wings. Glue extra feathers to the tips of the wings. Attach the wings to the central back of the sleeping part using rope, white shoelaces, or other soft materials.4. To make the halo, form a pipe cleaner in a 4-inch circle. Glue a strip of boa constrictor around its edge. Connect the other tube cleaner to the halo and make a 2-inch circle on its bottom, which you can sew, paste or tie to the hat. Angelic Devilish Eggs These demonic eggs are absolutely divine! Since most fat-laden gems are removed and replaced with a melting filling in the mouth of cottage cheese and Dijon mustard, you can still enjoy every delicious bite without all the blame.
